FRAMES FROM THE PAST

Family pictures from Glen Ullin's past

The Gustin family had a reunion in Glen Ullin in 1933 with the Rev. Arno Gustin O.S.B., who was then a newly ordained Catholic priest. Gustin went on to became president of St. John's University, Collegeville, Minn., and Mary College. Shown, left to right, are Mrs. Jochim (Eugenia Gustin) Schantz, Jochim Schantz, Mrs. Matt (Susan Wetsch) Schantz, Matt Schantz, Arno Gustin, his parents, John Gustin and Mrs. John (Gertrude Schmidt), Mrs. Mathias (Anna Maria Gustin) Schaaf. The photo was submitted by Joe and Rose Hellman, Glen Ullin.

Interesting Personalities-

Adam Forster, Richardton, 9/41 Tells of Early Threshing

Adam Forster, retired Richardton farmer and rancher, insists that the early days in this section had many advantages over present times even though there were many hardships to be encountered in pioneer times of Stark.

Foremost among Mr. Forster's recollections of events in this section was his experience in operating a threshing machine all through this territory.

In 1892, his father, Jacob Forster, purchased a threshing machine. For the next 11 years, Mr. Forster traveled about the country each fall, threshing grain. There were only four rigs in a large territory

The father would go around the country in a horse and buggy before the season opened and contract for the threshing work. When the season started, the machine would probably start somewhere around Glen Ullin and wind up near Dickinson.

Long Hauls

A schedule would be planned to make the moves from one job to the next as short as possible. Even with planning, some of the moves were long ones, especially when the separator was hauled by oxen.

Because of the scarcity of ma-chines, the distances between farms, and the slow mode of travel, threshing season was extended far beyond that of the present era of more and smaller machines and extensive use of combines.

At first, Mr. Forster and his brother, Jake, worked with their father. Later, they bought the rig themselves and continued the work, Threshing, Mr. Forster explains, was not a way to get rich quickly, but it did bring a fair income during the season. Farmer Had Crew Generally, the farmer whose crop was being threshed was responsible for providing men. The Forsters carried a full crew only one season. For the rest of the time, they had only those men who were essential to the machinery. Bundle and grain haulers were not in the contract.

Mr. Forster received four cents a bushel for threshing wheat. The season lasted about two months. There was very little shocking as wheat was all stacked to protect it against rain and snow. Sometimes, winter would set in before threshing was completed and the stacks had to be built to keep the grain in good shape until spring-

Biggest loss in grain stacked over winter was from mice. Mr. Forster explains he has seen many stacks riddled by the rodents.

The threshing engine was a straw-burner and presented someing of a fire hazard where stacks were close together. Mr. Forster recalls at least one narrow escape when sparks blew onto a stack of wheat. He happened to notice smoke form the top of the stack, grabbed a bucket and hit the fire first shot, thus saving what would have been a lot of fire fighting work a few minutes later. Cold Was Hardship

Cold also was an enemy of the threshers. Mr. Forster tells of crawling out of his bed in a strawstack many mornings to find frost or snow on the ground. One fall when they were threshing at the Joe Christen place, they had to thaw out the hose on the water tank before they could get water into the engine boiler.

In one instance, they completed threshing a place about supper time on a Saturday. Their next job was a few stacks on a farm seven miles away. To wind up the work, they moved the separator with oxen to the new location, set up the machine and threshed by the light of lanterns.

With strenuous work, they managed to finish the job late that night. After sitting around for a short while, they went to bed. In the morning, snow was piled all around the machine and they were unable to move it.

Born in Russia

Born near Sultz, Russia, Jan. 15, 1869, Mr. Forster attended school there. In 1890, to get away from compulsory military service, the family moved to the United States. They arrived in Hebron Nov. 7, 1890, and late that fall moved to Richardton.

For the first few years, Mr. Forster helped his father raise sheep and worked on other farms around Richardton. In 1897, he established his own homestead eight miles north of Richardton.

While herding sheep, Mr. Forster lived in four different sod shacks. One shack had to be abandoned when the range around it was burned out.

Cold Killed Sheep

In 1896, during the extreme cold, they took some of the sheep into the house to save them. The sod shack was too warm however. Mr. Forster explains that when sheep were turned out again, they fell as though they were shot as soon as the cold air struck them and never got up again.

Snow began falling in November of 1896, Mr. Forster reports, and people of that section were using sleighs for a full five months because the snow was so deep.

From 1906 to 1913, Mr. Forster had a livery barn, in Richardton. During these years, there was a large influx of land seekers and teams were constantly in demand. Sometimes there weren't enough rigs to go around.

1891 Crops Good

Crops in 1891 were even better than this year, Mr. Forster relates. On his father's place, wheat went 42 bushels to the acre in stubble field and 50 bushel to the acre on some plowed land.

Nov. 18, 1891, Mr. Forster married Miss Anne Hallmen at Richardton. They have 10 children, Ferdinand, farming north of Richardton; John, Richardton mechanic; Adam, Richardton gas station; Mrs. Tony Rixen, Richardton; Mrs. Cliff Dixen, Butte, Mont.; Val, a barber at Roberts, Mont.; Mrs. Nick Woehler, Bismarck; Raymond, a butcher in Richardton; Hilde-gard, Sioux City, Ia., and Nick, farming near Richardton.

Among other experiences, Mr. Forster was a councilman in Rich-ardton for many years.

Mrs. Anna Forster, 92 Honored at Reunion

A five-generation reunion is sight and hearing and memory," being held here in Spokane in Mrs. Forster said, "She does all

Mrs. Forster, who bakes all her own bread, plants her own garden, cooks, cleans her own house, sews all her own clothling and, in her spare time, fashions quilts for family members, brasts quite a collection of kin-

The sidewalks of the little 800-popu-Intion North Dakota town had Leen glass slick since November, and Mrs. Forster, who broke her hip 10 years ago, didn't want to go through that again. So she stayed inside. The "cabin tever" got so acute she simply decided to do a bit of visiting.

Among numerous relatives in the Inland Empire are a sister, Heart parish. In St. Ann's parth are a grandson and his wife, and Mrs. Bernell Forster, 611 Ray, who have seven connecters of their own cluding one matried child.

"Grandma has excellent eye-honor of the family tratriarch her own cooking — and she' — 92-year-old Mrs. Anna For-ster, of Richardton, N.D. — thinks it's a waste of time."

Widowed 10 years ago, Mrs. Forster keeps too busy to have time to waste. And she was weaned on work. Born in Halpstadt, Russia, July 16, 1873, her family emigrated to the U.S. when she was 18. Her future bridegroom and his family were on the same heat, but the conple didn't meet until later. Then they married and homesteaded in the Dakotas -- "where there was plenty of free land." They built their own sod house, lived in it two years, and then when they "got a little bit richer" erected one of stone chinked with gumbo (mud) witth walls at least 12-inches thick. The couple did the building them: selves.

Along with all the household chores, and 11 youngsters, Mrs. Forster helped her husband in those early years with wheat threshing - threshing the hard way, by hand.

In 1925 the couple retired

Mrs. Forster intends to stay in Spokane until May. And she great grandchildren. can't quite understand local residents who are complaining about the long, cold winter. She thinks Spokane's weather is delightful.

"They should try North Dakota!" she says, succinctly.
